Volume 51, Number 4 ~ January 27, 2019

“Come now, and let us reason together,”
says the LORD,
“Though your sins are like scarlet,
They shall be as white as snow;
Though they are red like crimson,
They shall be as wool.”

Tonk Talk by Mark T. Tonkery

Why are we tardy for worship and Bible Study?

I ask this question knowing full well that I am not always on time. Although I like to be early the fact remains that sometimes I am just plain late, because of the unexpected. I share this article, however, to ask a question: Is being late for worship and Bible Study a big deal? After all in school children get bad marks if they are tardy. If I am late in paying my bills there are certain penalties and sometimes I must pay higher interest rates. And if one is late coming to their job there is also a chance that they may get fired. So if being on time is so important in our secular world why shouldn't we pay more attention to being on time in our Christian worship and Bible study? Isn't God and spiritual matters more important than anything else in life?

What really intrigues me is the following observation about Christians' tardiness to the worship services. This observation was made not by a minister, elder, or even a Christian that we might look up to, but by an outsider, an atheist, a non-believer who is questioning the practices of believers.

Hermant Mehta is an atheist who wrote a book called; I sold My Soul on eBay. In it he describes his experiences as he visited all different kinds of churches across America-from very small to very large. He talks about the positives and the negatives of all, but in one chapter he talks about all the things that bothered him. One thing he mentions is this:

“Speaking of those who walk into church late, I want to know why they do so. Not everyone gets stuck in traffic. If church is so important, there is no reason to walk in late. In fact, if going somewhere to worship God is important, then people should arrive early. It seems completely disrespectful to me when people walk into the auditorium five or ten minutes into their service. And what's worse is when parents come in with their children, who learn by example that walking in late is not a big deal. It's just church, right? No need to get there on time. Is that what Christians want to teach their children?”

I can relate to what Hermant Mehta says, not only have I observed tardiness of Christians in the places I have preached but also as a visitor, I noticed the same thing. It is a common problem all round, but if we understand anything about God, doesn't He deserve our being punctual and our reverence. Heb 12:28-29, states, “Therefore let us be grateful for receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, and thus let us offer to God acceptable worship, with reverence and awe, for our God is a consuming fire.”

Doesn't God deserve better, or even our best! Isn't the first song, just as much apart of our worship as the last prayer? After all how would we feel if our children come home late for dinner or missed dinner completely? How do you think God feels when we miss part or all of the spiritual meal He offers us through worship?

We may not always be able to avoid the unexpected, but we all can do a little better job at planning ahead and preparing for worship so we will not disrespect God, miss a spiritual meal, interrupt others worship, and not allow our tardiness to become a persistent bad habit which is only passed on to our children.

DOUG'S DISCUSSION

We Will Be Together

I have to confess something to you guys. Tuesday nights are brutal. My wife and kids are currently staying with my in-laws in Zanesville while we wait for our house to sell. The current routine is for me to leave Parkersburg for Zanesville after church (and whatever meeting) on Sunday night, stay for a couple days, and leave . . . you guessed it . . . Tuesday evening. It is on the dreaded Tuesday evening when I give them a big hug and tell them I'll see them in five days. Five days! Bleh. Two thoughts help me through that moment. One: God willing, I'll see them in five days. Two: This situation only continues until my house sells, and then we get to be together just about every day.

All this is nothing against the wonderful people here at Camden Avenue. My new church family has done everything possible to make me feel at home. In fact, when I was away from home on my birthday someone bought me a couple of nice presents and someone else bought me a birthday cake. (You know who you are). You can't ask for more than that! In fact, I get hit on both ends of my trip because I'm also sad to leave you guys and miss out on the beginning of the week things going on here. It is going to be so wonderful when my family life and my church and work life are brought back together. It will be so wonderful when there aren't so many sad departures.

I'm fully aware I'm not the only one to experience this. Many of you have had this issue when you moved. Surely most of you know the difficulty of some family member moving to a different part of the country, or some close friend being transferred to a job that is hours away. This world makes a strong effort to force relationships apart. Not so with God! He does many things to bring people together. When there are two God seeks to make them one in Christ (see Galatians 3:28 and John 17:20-23). When some conflict comes up that threatens to drive people apart God desires peacemakers (Matthew 5:9) who make working things out a priority (Matthew 5:23-24). And even better than all this, my hope turns to the place where there will be no more departures, no separations. In this place there is no sorrow, only the joy of the Lord. I look forward to my house selling but I hope even more for the day when together "we will be with the Lord forever" (1 Thessalonians 4:17). Praise God that there will be such a day!

Minute of Meditation by Mark T. Tonkery

Heard on 910 AM WLTP

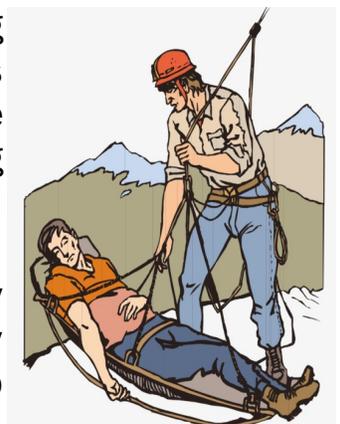

An Alpine climber, after facing the blinding snowstorm and freezing blasts of night air, almost ready to perish, came across a heap in his pathway, and found it to be a human body half-buried in the snow. The climber immediately began to uncover the person and began warming the man with the warmth of his own body. By doing this the climber and the man in the snow were both saved from the extreme cold.

Have we grown cold in our spiritual life? Cold by inaction, chilled by indifference, or frosted by anger? Oh, it is true we are often hurt by people, but it is people God works through to bring us healing and help us to overcome.

1 Timothy 4:16 reminds us, "Keep a close watch on yourself and on the teaching. Persist in this, for by so doing you will save both yourself and your hearers,"

It is true that sometimes by helping others that we ourselves may be helped.

I am Mark T. Tonkery with a minute of meditation from the Camden Avenue church of Christ where you are always welcome.

An old Cherokee told his grandson, "My son, there is a battle between two wolves inside us all.

One is Evil. It is anger, jealousy, greed, resentment, inferiority, lies and ego. The other is Good. It is joy, peace, love, hope, humility, kindness, empathy, and truth."

The boy thought about it, and asked, "Grandfather, which wolf wins?"

The old man quietly replied, "The one you feed."
